For each problem that you missed, be sure to

- 1) Write the correct answer with a complete explanation why it's correct.
- 2) Write a new problem about the same topic and answer it completely and correctly. Make sure that it's different than the one you just missed.

Your test resubmittal should be word processed and paper clipped, along with your concepts test, to this cover sheet.

How to Write a Test Resubmittal

In writing a test resubmittal, your goal is to show me that you have learned from the mistakes that you made on the test and to prove to me that you completely understand the concepts now. In order to do this, you need to do four steps for every problem that you are correcting.

First, show that you know the correct answer and provide a complete explanation of why the answer is what it is.

Second, create and answer another question about the same topic that further shows your understanding of the concept in question. Please don't regurgitate the same question, slightly modified. Make up a new question that shows some originality.

Technical issues: Your resubmittal should be work processed and double spaced. You should spell check and proof read it carefully before turning it in. It should include diagrams and equations (which should be hand written or drawn) as needed. The resubmittal should also have a cover sheet filled out completely, and the original test. Please don't make corrections on the original test, as that makes it harder to see what the original mistake was. The resubmittal is due within a week of the time you receive the corrected test from me.
